The Evolution Of An Empire

The structure of the British Empire and the conception of empire entertained by the British people, both at home and abroad, has long been a puzzle to other nations and peoples. With the exception of the British themselves, people have been unable, as a rule, to harmonize the idea of several nations, each enjoying autonomous government and to all intents and purposes quite independent, constituting a compact and united Empire.

Possibly nowhere in the world was there a more mistaken conception of the unity and strength of the British Empire entertained than in Germany prior to 1914. Intelligent and presumably well informed German writers confidently predicted that the first serious war in which Great Britain was involved would be a signal for Canada, Australia and South Africa to throw off what they termed "the British yoke." Equally confident were the predictions that India would blaze into revolt, that Irishmen would rebel almost to a man, and that Egypt would quickly drive the British there into the sea. The loosely constituted British Empire would, they declared, quickly fall to pieces.

But the Great War had not really begun before it became manifest to the world that the British Empire was one and indivisible, many times stronger and more united than any of the empires of old held together by force and great armies. Instead of repudiating their allegiance to the British crown, Canada and Australia poured out their wealth and their manhood voluntarily and enthusiastically in support of their common Empire. The few discontented ones in South Africa were quickly quelled, and South Africa proceeded to render equally valuable aid to the Empire. India provided hundreds of thousands of soldiers and untold wealth, and brought about the downfall of Turkey in Mesopotamia and Palestine. The Irish, as usual, contributed many of the most valiant soldiers in the British armies.

With the ending of the war, the peaceful evolution of the British Empire proceeds apace. By the free act of the British Government and Parliament, Ireland is constituted a Free State within the Empire; the protectorate over Egypt is brought to an end and the ancient land of the Pharaohs granted autonomous government; step by step the rights and powers of self-government are being freely given to India just as rapidly as the people are capable of exercising those rights and powers.

Some unthinking people who fail to understand the genius of the British administration profess to see in these things a gradual weakening of the Empire. They are sadly mistaken. These developments are signs of the strength of the Empire, not of any inherent weakness, and as time passes each of these units in the great British commonwealth of nations will give added strength and power to what is today the most powerful international force in existence, and the greatest stabilizing force in the world today.

Many nations have yet to learn that the extension of the liberties of the subject make for increased loyalty and, therefore, national strength, while policies of repression and coercion but add fuel to the flames of discontent, and, if persisted in, must inevitably end in disaster.

The British way is the human way, the commonsense way, the Christian way. One unit in this great British family of nations may find it necessary, in working out its own development and advancing its own welfare, to adopt, say a tariff against the products of one of its sister nations, and the world at once interprets this as a weakening in the links that bind the Empire together. But not so. If the adoption of such a policy is found essential to the upbuilding of a particular part of the Empire, and adds to the strength of that part, then the whole Empire is made stronger. But should the right to take such action be denied to any part, not only would that part be crippled in its development but irritation would arise which would prove a weakness and menace to the whole.

It seems to have been given to the British people to step into the new and unpeopled portions of the earth, and into some of the older but less enlightened countries, and establish order and good government, provide modern means of communication and education, and then, when the people have advanced far enough, to entrust them with the direction of their own affairs. And every step taken in the carrying out of this great British policy may well be welcomed. Each such step is an evidence, not of British decay, but of British greatness and strength.

WINTER WEATHER HARD ON LITTLE ONES

Our Canadian winters are exceedingly hard on the health of little ones. The weather is often so severe that the mother cannot take the little ones out for an airing. The consequence is that baby is confined to overheated, badly ventilated rooms; takes cold and becomes cross and peevish. Baby's Own Tablets should be given to keep the little ones healthy. They are a mild laxative which regulate the stomach and bowels and thus prevent colds. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Manitoba to Use Airplanes for Fire Patrols and Other Work

Manitoba will have a fleet of five airplanes next summer, two or three of which will be able to carry at least 10 passengers, to patrol the forest areas and perform various other duties for the Dominion Government officers in the province. Several machines are being erected and overhauled, while two large F3 seaplanes are expected early in the spring from British Columbia. Duties of the air-fleet, besides patrolling forest regions to detect fires, will include the conveying of officials who will pay treaty money to the Indians in the northlands, and the rendering of assistance in the government reclamation survey of the Carrot River district.

British Columbia Development During The Past Century Makes Interesting History

(By Irene Todd)

Gazing out across the gray rolling Pacific and guarded by the sublime Canadian Rockies, that form its eastern boundary, is a stretch of land three times the size of the British Isles, or approximately 381,000 square miles of some of the richest and most beautiful country in the Dominion of Canada. It is British Columbia, the most westerly of her nine provinces—the one which but a century ago was a dense impenetrable forest whose sleep was broken only by the trampling of the sun on the shore, the singing of the wind in the tree tops, the whoop of the red man, and the bickering of her few lone trading posts.

Since that time three transcontinental lines of railway have pierced their way through the mountain passes following the courses of her broad noble rivers to the ocean and bringing with them civilization and cultivation, two of these forming part of the great Canadian National Railways system, which is owned by the people of Canada. And today her old-time trading posts are fine modern commercial centres, her valleys are being settled and cultivated into orchards, farms and gardens; her giant century-old cedars and firs of which she has 182,750,000 acres, are falling before the lumberman's axe, and millions of dollars worth of her lumber and its products are being exported to foreign markets. Likewise, the wealth of her indented sea-coast and salmon streams is being harvested, her salmon pack alone for 1919 amounting to 1,393,256 cases; her mountain sides are being tapped for their hidden store of minerals and not one of the provinces is making greater strides in development than she.

Although the history of the North Pacific coast and the Pacific province has been comparatively peaceful, it is none the less interesting and romantic. As early as the sixteenth century those waters were the mecca of the English, Spanish, Dutch and Russian explorers in search of the mythical Strait of Annon, which was supposed to lead through the northern part of the continent from the Pacific to the Atlantic. All during the eighteenth century, the Spanish sailors from New Spain timorously felt their way along the Californian shore and up the North Pacific coast to Alaska, naming bays and headlands and obtaining immense catches of fish and sea-otter. However, they failed to make a landing. This remained to be done by Captain James Cook, who with his two quaint four-masted sailing vessels entered Nootka Sound, on the west side of Vancouver Island in March, 1778. Here, in casting anchor, the vessels were surrounded by a fleet of canoes filled with Indians decked out in feathers, skins and war-paint, all eager to exchange the pelts of bears, wolves, foxes, martens and deer for the goods the explorers possessed. Cook arrived back to England with impressing tales of the giant luxuriant timber growth of the country, its fine harbors, and the wealth of furs obtainable, and soon an extensive fur trade on the North Pacific coast sprang up.

Other explorers followed, but not until 1795, when Capt. George Vancouver had sailed through the Strait of Juan De Fuca, explored Puget Sound and proceeded through the Gulf of Georgia and Queen Charlotte Sound, finally sailing completely around the island which now bears his name, was this land claimed by Great Britain.

In the meantime a dauntless and courageous fur-trader, Alexander MacKenzie, of the North-West Company of Montreal, who in 1789 had reached the Arctic by way of the Mackenzie, decided to undertake the perilous journey across the mountains through the great unknown to the Pacific and arrived at Burke's Channel a few weeks after Vancouver had been surveying the coast at that point. Although he reported it a land of great fertility, with immense rivers teeming with fish, and mighty forests filled with wild fur-bearing animals, the company thought it too remote and too difficult of access to admit of profitable trade and left it untouched until in 1805 they decided to extend their line of posts from the Great Lakes to the mouth of the Columbia.

For this undertaking Simon Fraser, a youthful bourgeois of the company was chosen. He established four forts in the new territory which was then called New Caledonia, but the great river which he traversed and which brought him to the coast in 1806, was not the Columbia. It was the river which now bears his name, and which is the largest river whose basin lies entirely within the bounds of the province, having a length of 799 miles and draining an area of 91,709 square miles. At its mouth are now situated the fine cities of New Westminster and Vancouver, the fourth largest city in the Dominion, out of whose harbor float the ships of practically every nation.

While Fraser was exploring one part of the province, another daring trader, David Thompson, was at work establishing posts on a tributary of the Columbia River, now known as the Thompson. He arrived at the mouth of the Columbia in 1811, to find a post had already been established there by the Pacific Fur Company, organized by John Jacob Astor, of New York. In 1813, this company was taken over by the North-West Company, which in turn was amalgamated with the rival fur-trading company, the Hudson Bay Company, in 1821 when the Imperial Government passed an act giving the new company a monopoly of the entire trade of the district, which was now known as the Company's Western Department.

Soon, trading posts spread all the way up the coast of the mainland, and in 1824, Fort Vancouver was established as the headquarters of the Western Department and rapidly became a hive of industry. By 1836 a farm of nearly 3,000 acres was under cultivation in the vicinity of the Fort, producing wheat, barley, oats and vegetables, while an orchard of ten acres yielded abundantly. There were also two sawmills and two flour mills supplying the company's needs, and providing export trade with the Sandwich Islands, and the Russian settlements to the north. This prosperity continued until 1842, when the headquarters of the department was transferred to the south end of Vancouver Island, to the site of what is now Victoria, the charmingly situated capital of the province, with a population of 55,000.

At Victoria a fort was soon built, the land tilled, stock imported and as "ships from England had orders to sail direct to this port and then proceed to the Columbia River with the remainder" it gradually grew in importance. By 1847, 300 acres were under cultivation, and that year two Russian vessels took from Victoria large quantities of wheat, beef and mutton. By this time coal had already been discovered on the island, and in 1849 a fort was built at Nanaimo, where the foundation of the now great coal industry of the island was laid, a market even at that time being found for it in San Francisco. In this same year Vancouver was raised to a colony, with a governor and fourteen justices of the peace to administer its affairs, while the Hudson Bay Company was given control of the land for ever, subject only to the domination of the British Crown. For this privilege they were to pay an annual rent of seven shillings, settle upon the land within five years, a colony of British subjects, and dispose of the land for colonization purposes at reasonable prices. However, if in 1859, at the expiration of the company's license of exclusive trade with the Indians, the Government wished, they might recover the island by paying the company for their expenditures on it.

On the mainland the number of posts were being increased, missionaries with a few settlers were coming in from the east, ships from England brought distinguished visitors and settlers, and in the south, in what was known as the Oregon Country, Americans from the Eastern States were trading and settling. But the newcomers in Oregon refused to submit to the rule of the British Company, bringing up the question of the international boundary which in 1846 was settled as latitude 49 degrees. In 1859 the British Government held an enquiry regarding the company's administration, after which their exclusive right over the mainland was revoked and British Columbia formed into a colony by an act defining its boundaries, north and south, the 60th and the 49th parallels respectively; and east and west, the Rocky Mountains and the Pacific Ocean. James Douglas, also governor of Vancouver Island, was made governor of the new colony, and a local legislature and administration of justice provided. At this time the company's rule on Vancouver Island also came to an end, being purchased by the government for £57,000, while the company was allowed to retain the fort property and certain town lots with several thousand acres in the vicinity of Victoria.

In 1853 there had been rumors of gold being found in the Columbia and Fraser Rivers, but when in 1857 the Hudson's Bay Company's steamer arrived in San Francisco with a consignment of gold for the United States mint, the news created the greatest furor California had ever known. The following year all kinds of adventurers to the number of probably 25,000 left for the new diggings, in all sorts of craft, with only the vaguest idea of their destiny. The primitive streets of Victoria swarmed with the eager cosmopolitan crowd and shops and shanties sprang up like magic. They rushed to the mainland, up the Fraser where they soon occupied all the auriferous bars from Port Hope to Lytton, the district now penetrated by the Canadian National Railways line to Vancouver. Although there were many disappointments, many fortunes were made and a great many of the prospectors, realising the wealth of the country, settled there and laid the foundation of the great mining industry which now exists, and which, although only in its infancy, yielded over thirty-three million dollars in 1919.

Canadian Cattle for Trinidad

Trade in Pedigreed Stock Should Become Important Item

With the new steamship service between Canada and the West Indies, says The Commercial Intelligence Journal, there will be greater facility offered for conveying pedigreed stock from Canada to Trinidad for improving the herds of that island. In Trinidad the demand for imported cattle is greater than in any other colony of the West Indies. The import of animals of all kinds in 1920 totalled over $500,000. Hitherto Venezuela has supplied the greater part of this demand. The United States supplies the bulk of horses and mules imported; Canada has sold only a few animals for breeding purposes. But with better transportation arrangements the trade in pedigreed stock between this country and Trinidad should become an important item. Herds in the island now total 10,448 head of cattle and 15,854 of pigs, goats and sheep. An act, dealing with contagious and infectious diseases, has recently been passed, covering all that is required to prevent the introduction and spread of cattle diseases.

Graphic Story Of The Terrible Famine Conditions In Land Of The Soviets

Russia, a great, dark land of golden possibilities where famine conditions are so terrible as to be almost beyond description; Lenin and Trotsky deep-thinking men of vision who have been working for a mistaken ideal and not the blood-thirsty tyrants that they have been made out to be; the Red Army, a well-disciplined and honorable military organization that would do credit to Canada or the United States. These are a few of the things that Col. H. J. Mackie, of Ottawa, late Member of Parliament for North Renfrew, and president of the Canadian Branch of "The Save the Russian Children Fund," talked about in an address he gave recently. He had just visited that much-misunderstood country, and has been right in the heart of the famine areas along the Volga River and speaks from observation, not from hearsay. What Col. Mackie has to tell is not pleasant to hear. It is horrifying. In his six days' inspection of those famine areas, under special escort of the Soviet Government, he saw the dead piled in great masses, so numerous that those in charge of the burial work could not attend to their duties. He saw little children dropping over as they walked and parents resignedly preparing to die in order that their offspring might live. And he also saw evidence of cannibalism, desecration of the dead.

"I am not a speaker," he said. "I do not possess the power of eloquence to describe these scenes, but even if I did I could not describe them. They are beyond description, beyond comparison. There is nothing in the past history of the world with which to compare them. All I say is this: Thank God they have tried out this new doctrine of Communism in Russia instead of in Canada or the United States or England. We owe them a debt of gratitude for that alone, if for nothing else."

The Soviet Government at Moscow is not to blame for the famine conditions along the Volga, Col. Mackie declared. On the other hand, the political administration is doing all in its power to assist in alleviating the suffering and is joining in the appeal to the outside nations. Canadians must discount many of the stories that are circulated about the Soviet Government, he insisted. The idea that the trains carrying food to the famine districts are pillaged long before they reach the needy is erroneous and should be dispelled. He could testify from actual experience. He had ridden on one of those trains across Russia, through the districts where the Red Army holds sway and not one pound of food was stolen, not one car tampered with. The train was escorted its entire journey by Red guards and a more honorable lot of men, so far as the protection of food was concerned, he could not have found his saws remain without food for more than 36 hours and never trouble the cars, until permission was given their commander to take a small amount and distribute it among the men. This wonderful discipline may be caused by fear but Col. Mackie believed it was something greater and better, the love of the little children and of Russia.

So anxious is the Soviet Government that the foodstuffs reach the suffering that it has made itself responsible for the loss of every pound of flour or grain and carefully reimburses the famine workers for everything.

The real causes of the famine conditions in the Volga basin are the failure of the crop last year and the raids waged over that district by Generals Wrangel, Denikin and Kolchak. The Volga district was the centre of the fighting between the Red Army and the counter-revolutionists, and the poor peasants in between suffered. Their granaries were pillaged and their farm animals requisitioned. The first rain did not fall until late in August last year and in consequence not a grain of wheat sprouted; for every ten bushels of rye sown, two were harvested; the potatoes gathered were the size of marbles and olives. The entire harvest in many farm-yards could be loaded on a Canadian farm wagon, the harvest of 75 or 100 acres.

Speaking of the Canadian committee of the "Save the Russian Children Fund," of which he is the chairman, Col. Mackie said that in the ten days since organization the committee had been able to forward to St. John ready for transshipment to Russia 150,000 tons of foodstuffs, valued at between $18,000 and $20,000, and all collected at an expense of not more than $50, as outside of stenographers and other office help, all the work in connection with the fund is being done gratuitously. Branches have been organized as far west as Edmonton, and it is hoped to secure the assistance of clubs, churches and societies everywhere. As the food supplied consisted principally of bread, rice, milk and lard, it was possible to furnish meals at the cost of three cents each. This meant that $1 a month would feed a child, or $5 till the next harvest. To equip a kitchen which would feed 100 children till harvest time costs $500, and it was his hope that organizations such as the Kiwanis Club and similar bodies, would undertake to look after the funds for maintaining one of these.

Planning Flight Across Pacific

Former Air Force Member Hopes to Make Trip

That a Trans-Pacific aerial service in the near future is a possibility, is the opinion of J. Roach, formerly of the Royal Air Force. His record overseas was an enviable one, and more than one enemy plane has been placed to his credit. It is his intention to qualify for commercial flying in Canada, and as soon as his course is completed, he will secure from the Maurice-Farman Aeroplanes Ltd., Rouen, France, a type of machine suitable for the purpose.

The Trans-Pacific route would probably be north along the B.C. coast to a point in Alaska. From there to the Aleutian Islands, across the Behring Sea to the Kamohatka Peninsula and south along the Asiatic coast-line to Japan and Chinese ports. Fuel stations would be arranged for at distances of from 5000 to 1,000 miles, supplies of all kinds being obtainable at these points. An effort will be made to secure the co-operation of those countries immediately affected by this service.

Mr. Roach is confident that the initial steps of this great movement will be taken within a year. He says the speed at which the world of aeromantics is moving calls for a drastic change in the immediate future in the system of world-wide transportation and hopes that this development, emanating on Canadian soil and backed by Canadian finance will be realized, placing the Dominion once again in the foreground of modern progress.

Grain Feeding Western Sheep At Fort William, Ontario

Courtesy, Canadian National Railway.

The accompanying illustration shows a big bunch of the 7,000 Western Canadian sheep that were grain fed this winter at Fort William, Ontario, at the head of Lake Superior. Undertaken as an experiment, the plan has proven entirely successful and will probably become a permanent industry. The sheep were fed on grain screenings supplied by the elevator companies free of cost, the only charge being a nominal fee for transferring cars to the feed pens. The sheep gained steadily in weight from the first feed were in prime condition when sold to Eastern buyers. The Fort William Board of Trade is taking an active interest in this enterprise and is doing all possible to promote it. The sheep were shipped by Mr. R. C. Harvey, a well-known rancher of Lethbridge, Alberta.

Of course, it is impossible to say how many took part in the affair, but it is not likely the odds numbered more than two, in which case they are both accounted for. The one captured had no money to speak of in his possession, but he may have cached it somewhere, and when he sees the rope before him will be likely to make him talk. They seem to have a pretty straight case against him. Not only was he captured practically in bed, but they have another important clue. He owns up to his name frankly enough, and it seems the revolver found on the scene of the crime had his initials, "J. T."—Jim Travers, cut in the grip. In fact, he admits the revolver is—What's wrong, Miss Harris? Are you ill?

Beulah's breath had stopped at the mention of Travers' name, and she staggered to a chair. Harris, too, was overcome.

"We knew him down East," Beulah explained, when she had somewhat recovered her composure. "I could not have thought it possible!"

"I didn't think he would have carried it that far," said Harris, at length, speaking very slowly and sadly. "Jim, Jim, you've made a worse mistake than mine."

Mary learned of the disclosure in a few minutes, and followed Beulah upstairs.

"You poor child!" she said, as she overtook her daughter.

"It's not me," she shot back. "It's Jim. He must be saved, some way. It's impossible to think—I won't think of it!"

Headaches Gone

Perhaps you can imagine what this means to one who has suffered terribly with headaches for ten years.

Read about it in this latter.

Mrs. Tena A. Smith, Country Harbor Cross Roads, N. S., writes:

"I feel that if anyone can recommend Dr. Chase's medicines I certainly can. I suffered for ten years from severe headaches, and although I took all kinds of headache powders they just relieved me at the time. I became very nervous and run-down, and everything seemed to trouble me. I have taken eighteen boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and it has made an entirely new person of me. I feel that I could not have lived without it. I do not have one headache now for every hundred I used to have, and my nerves are good and strong. I just weighed 109 pounds when I began using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and now I weigh 121. Knowing what this treatment has done for me, I cannot too highly recommend it to others."

It, no matter what they say! Let them find what they like! . . . But he's in a hole, and we've got to get him out."

The mother shook her head with some recollection of the blindness of love. And as her own heart refused to accept any idea of guilt on the part of Travers.

"I want to be alone, mother," said Beulah. "I want to be alone, to think."

As she strode rapidly through the paths in the cotton-woods, the girl gradually became conscious of one dominating impulse in her maze of emotions. She must see Jim. She must see him at once. She must see him alone. There were things to be said that needed—that admitted—no witness. She knew that. Arbutus or one of the men would willingly ride to town for her, or with her, but this was a task for her alone. They must know nothing until it was over.

Outwardly calm, but inwardly burning with impatience, she returned to the house and went through the form of eating supper. Then she dallied through the evening, giving her attention to Allan until all the household, except her mother, had gone to bed.

"I will wait with Allan to-night," her mother said. "You need rest more than I do. Lie down in my room and try to get some sleep."

Her mother kissed her, and Beulah went to her room. But not to sleep. When silence filled all the house she slipped gently down the stairs, through the front yard, and into the corral. Fortunately her horse had been stabled. She harnessed him with some difficulty in the darkness, and threw herself into the saddle. For a hundred yards she walked him; then she drew him off the hard road on to the grass and led him to a trot. Half a mile from the house she was swinging at a hard gallop down the dark valley. The soft night wind pressed gently down the flanks of her horse. More than once even the sure-footed ranger almost fell over the treacherous bader-holes, but she had learned to ride like the saddle itself, and she merely tightened the rein and urged him faster.

Two hours of such violence were a safety-valve to her emotions, and both horse and rider were content to enter the little town at a walk. Here and there a coal-oil lamp shed its cube of yellow light through an unblinded window, but the streets were deserted and in utter darkness. She had now reached the point at which her general plan to see Travers must be worked out in detail, and she allowed the horse his time as she turned the matter over in her mind. She could doubt that if she found Sergeant Grey he would permit an interview, but she shrank from making the request. She might do so at a last resort, but it possible she meant to seek out her lover—for so she thought of him—for herself. She knew that the jails in the smaller towns were crowded, but where the prisoner was locked up and usually left without a guard. The first thing was to find the jail.

At a crossing her horse almost collided with a boy returning home from some late errand. "Oh, My Boy," she said. "Come here, please, I want you to help me."

The boy approached hesitatingly, as though suspicious that some kind of trick were being played on him. "Can you tell me," she said, in a low voice, "where the jail is? I'll give you a dollar if you do."

"There ain't no jail here, miss," he replied frankly, evidently satisfied that the question was bona fide. "There's a coop, but you wouldn't give a dime to see it. It's just a kind of a shed."

"That's just what I want to see," she continued, "and I'll give you a dollar to show me where it is."

"Easy pickin'," said the boy. "Steer your horse along this way."

He led her through the main part of the town, to where a one-story building, somewhat apart, stood aloof in the darkness.

"Some coop, ain't it?" said her guide, with boyish irony. "My dad says that's what we git fer votin' against the Government. The fire truck's in the front end, an' there's a cell with bars behind. Do you want to see that, too?"

"Yes, that's what I want to see, but I can find it myself now, thank you."

"Say, miss, you better be kerful. They've got a murder'r in there now—Oh, say—with a sudden change in his voice—"maybe he's somethin' to you?" They ain't proved nothin' against him yet."

"Yes, he's a good deal to me," she said.

"Brother?" he demanded, with disconcerting persistence.

"No."

If her eyes could have pierced the darkness she would have seen a broad smile of understanding spreading over his young face. But it was a sympathetic smile withal. "Then I guess this dollar stands for 'beat it?' he remarked."

"You win," she said, falling into his slang. "Also, forget it."

"I gotchub, miss," he said, trotting off. Then he called back through the darkness, "An' I hope he git's off."

"God bless him for that," she said to herself, as she dismounted and made her way to the back of the building. She saw the outline of a door, which was undoubtedly locked, and further down the same wall was a little square window, with bars on it. There appeared to be only one cell, so there was no problem of locating the right one.

She stole up along the wall, but the window was too high for her. Searching about the littered yard she found a square tin, such as the ranchers use to carry coal-oil. Mounting this she was able to bring her face to the bars.

The window was open for ventilation, and she strained her ear, but at first could hear nothing for the tumultuous beating of her own heart. But at length she seemed to catch the sound of regular breathing from within.

"Jim," she said, in a low voice, listening intently. But there was no response.

"Jim," she repeated, a little louder. She fancied she heard a stir, and the sound of breathing seemed to cease.

"Yes!" came a quick reply. "Yes! Who is it?"

"Come to the window, Jim."

In a moment she saw the outline of his face through the darkness.

"Beulah Harris," he demanded, in his quiet voice, "what are you doing here?"

A great happiness surged about her at the sound of his voice and the warmth of his breath against her face. "I might ask the same, Jim, but such questions are embarrassing. Anyway, I am on the right side of the wall."

She saw his teeth gleam in the darkness. What a wonderful sound he was!

"But you shouldn't have come like this," he protested, and his voice was serious enough. "You are compromising yourself."

"Not I," she answered. "These bars are more inflexible than the stiffest chaparrone. And I just had to see you, Jim, at once. We've got to get you out of here."

"I'll be all right," he said, with a "getting better."

"And your father? Pretty angry at me, I guess."

"No. Father isn't angry any more. He's just sorry."

"Times are changing, Beulah. But if he would that sack around my neck I wouldn't mind him at all when he's cross."

She laughed a little, mirthful ripple. Then, with sudden seriousness, "But, Jim, we shouldn't be jesting. We've got to get you out of here."

"I'm not worrying, Beulah," he answered. "They seem to have the drop on me, but I know a few things they don't. Shall I tell you what I know?"

"No."

"Why?"

"Because it would seem like arguing—like trying to prove you are innocent. And you don't need to prove anything to me. You understand? You don't need to prove anything to me."

She felt his eyes hot on her face through the darkness. "You don't need to prove anything to me," she repeated.

What had Beulah to do with it? He scolded himself for permitting her intrusion, and turned his mind to the mellow fields where he would follow the plough until the sun dipped into the Rockies. Government Criticised By Meighen Over The Appointment Of Speaker

Ottawa.—The first session of the fourteenth parliament of Canada opened with the swearing in of members and the signing of the roll. On the first item of business of the Commons the election of Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux, member for Gaspé, as Speaker, the Government was taken to task by the leader of the opposition, Right Hon. Arthur Meighen.

The Government, said Mr. Meighen, had taken unto itself the functions of parliament. It was the right of parliament and not of the Government or the Prime Minister, to say who should be Speaker. Yet on the day the new cabinet was announced, the Premier had also announced that Hon. Mr. Lemieux would be the new Speaker of the House. Mr. Meighen agreed with all that the Prime Minister had said with regard to the qualifications of Mr. Lemieux for the position of Speaker.

The leader of the opposition also criticized the Government for departing from the custom of promoting the deputy-speaker to the rank of Speaker. This practice had been followed for years past, but the present Government had seen fit to depart from it, despite the fact that George Bolvin, member for Sheffield, had all the qualifications necessary and in addition had served with such satisfaction as deputy-speaker that the choice of him as Speaker would have given eminent satisfaction.

The Prime Minister and Hon. T. A. Crerar, leader of the Progressives, voiced appreciation of Mr. Lemieux in respect to his lengthy parliamentary experience and his qualifications for the position of Speaker. Mr. Crerar caused an outburst of laughter when he prefaced his remarks by stating that he spoke "for this deplacated annex of the Liberal party," a phrase which had been used last year by Right Hon. Mr. Meighen in referring to Mr. Crerar and his followers.

Hon. Mr. Lemieux was declared elected by acclamation and taking the chair, expressed his gratification of the honor which had been conferred on him and said it would be his pleasure to serve the House, not as a party man, but as a servant of parliament and of the country.

Canada's Fire Losses Heavy

Property Damage in 1921 Over Forty-Five Million

Ottawa.—Fire losses in Canada for 1921 amounted to $5.22 per capita as compared with $0.99 per capita in Great Britain, according to information made public by the Dominion Fire Commissioner. During the year the 25,916 fires reported to the department of insurance occasioned property damage amounting to $45,015,920, exclusively of incalculable loss arising from forest fires, the commissioner points out. The 1921 fire loss, of which approximately $34,000,000 or 75 per cent. was covered by insurance constitutes a substantial increase over the losses of the three previous years. In 1920 the loss amounted to $28,745,500; in 1919, $25,361,240; and in 1918, $23,817,050. During 1921 the fire losses in Great Britain only amounted to $36,400,000.

London.—By a vote of 208 to 60, the House of Commons permitted Lord Robert Cecil to introduce a bill designed to extend suffrage to women on the same terms as to men. After the division was taken, the bill was given its first reading.

AS A GOOD FARMER TREATS HIS FARM:

In a sense this community is like a farm—it pays according to the way it is treated.

The successful farmer co-operates with his farm. The same principle holds good in community development.

Our community is composed of two closely related elements—town and country—and they are both essential to healthy community growth.

Accomplishing this is simply a matter of sincere co-operation among all of us in this community.

Our idea is to sell only such goods as have the quality to give high grade results. To consider good performance by our implements as part of our obligation. And to practice the square deal towards each and every customer. On this basis we invite the co-operation of every farmer in this community.

We have made arrangements with the E. H. Heath Co. Limited who publish the CANADIAN POWER FARMER whereby we are able to offer that farm magazine together with our own weekly at the one price for both papers.

The CANADIAN POWER FARMER is Western Canada's biggest farm monthly. It is now in its twentieth year which means that it is thoroughly established throughout the West. It deals with the mechanical side of the farm. Every issue is full of helpful hints and experiences on the operation of all kinds of farm machinery from a washing-machine to a tractor. Its editor has just completed a trip of several months over Western Canada in a motor car for the purpose of studying the mechanical needs of the farmers. He visited the farmers, lived with them and worked with them. The results of his trip will appear during the next twelve months.

This offer may be withdrawn at any time. Without doubt your intention is to renew for this weekly, then why not take advantage now. After having a typhoid fever I was in a very weakened condition, and by the time I had taken one bottle I was completely restored to health and strength. IF YOU'RE A YOUNG WOMAN OR EVEN IN MIDDLE LIFE
Here is Some Good Advice for You From a Prominent Woman

London, Ont.—"When I reached middle age I was in very poor health, was rundown, nervous, would have fainting spells and heat flashes. I was a physical wreck. I tried many different medicines but the only medicine that gave me any relief was Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Before I had taken a half bottle I was feeling like a different person—the more I took the stronger I got. What 'Favorite Prescription' did for me I am sure it will do for other women at this critical period of life if they will give it a fair trial."—Mrs. M. M. Taylor, 569 Hill St.

Better go now to your neighborhood drug store and obtain Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription in tablets or liquid. Write Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., for free medical advice, or send 10c for trial pkg. of tablets to Dr. Pierce's Laboratory in Bridgeport, Conn.

Murdoch's Straight Reply

Tells Laborers He Favors Government Retention of C. N. R.

James Murdoch, federal minister of labor, has replied to charges made against him in the trades and labor council, says a Hamilton dispatch. Mr. Murdoch takes the council not to place much reliance on the reports of a Toronto paper concerning him and announces that he is in favor of the public ownership and operation of Canada's 22,000 miles of nationally-owned railways, and believes that they will pay under public ownership. As to his reported opposition to unemployment insurance, he says he favors doing everything possible to furnish employment rather than insurance against unemployment.

GENERAL DEBILITY FOLLOWS INFLUENZA

The After Effects Often More Serious Than the Disease Itself

No reasonable precaution to avert an attack of influenza should be spared. The disease itself often proves fatal and its after effects among those who are spared, make the life of the victim one of almost constant misery. Ask almost any of those who have been afflicted by this trouble what their present condition of health is and most of them will answer: "Since I had the influenza I have never been fully well." This trouble leaves behind it a persistent weakness of the limbs, shortness of breath, bad digestion, palpitation of the heart and a tired feeling even at the slightest exertion. This is due to the thin-blooded condition in which the patient is left after the fever and influenza have subsided. This condition will continue until the blood is built up again, and for building up the blood and strengthening the nerves nothing can equal a fair treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. The value of this medicine in cases of this kind is shown by the statement of Mr. Edward J. McGuire, Pembroke, Ont., who says:—"In the fall of 1918 I was attacked with the influenza—and not in a mild form either. I was confined to my room for three weeks, and although the influenza subsided I did not regain my health. As a matter of fact I seemed to be growing weaker, was subject to fainting spells and my feet and ankles were badly swollen. The doctor told me that my condition had developed into a serious case of anemia, and although I was under his care for over two months I was not improving in any way. At this stage one of my friends advised me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I was loath to do so, and I began to think myself hopeless. However, I was finally persuaded to try them, and by the time I had used two boxes there was no doubt they were helping me. I continued taking the pills until I had used a dozen boxes, when I found that every symptom of the trouble had left me and I was again enjoying the best of health. I returned to my work and have ever since been in good health and feel that I owe it entirely to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I think that anyone who is suffering from the after effects of influenza, or any form of anemia should give this medicine a fair trial."

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills through any dealer in medicine, or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

As a result of recent earthquakes in Chili, large mountains in the Andes range sank an average of 160 feet, a sufficient distance to disclose peaks beyond that had been hidden from sight.

Nearly all children are subject to worms, and many are born with them. Spare them suffering by using Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator, an excellent remedy.

Looking from one lofty mountain range across to another, enormous distances may be spanned. The record is said to be between Mount Sparta, in Mexico, and the Sierra Madre, the two ranges being about 200 miles apart.

When a mother detects from the writhings and fretting of a child that worms are troubling it, she can procure a reliable remedy in Miller's Worm Powders which will expel all worms from the system. They may cause vomiting, but this need cause no anxiety, because it is but a tummy festination of their thorough work. No worms can long exist where these Powders are used.

Autos in Canada

Mother! Move Child's Bowels With California Fig Syrup

Hurry mother! Even a sick child loves the "fruity" taste of "California Fig Syrup" and it never fails to open the bowels. A teapoonful today may prevent a sick child tomorrow. If constipated, bilious, feverish, fretful, has cold, colic, or if stomach is sour, tongue coated, breath bad, remember a good cleansing of the little bowels is often all that is necessary.

Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother! You must say "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup.

NOW DO WORK WITH EASE

Because Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored My Health

Hornell, N. Y.—"I was in bad health but there didn't seem to be any one thing the matter with me."

"I was tired all over and it was an effort for me to move. I was irritable and could not sleep nights and had trouble with my bowels and at my periods. It seemed that nearly every one around me knew of your medicine and wanted me to try it, so at last I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Tablets and Lydia E. Pinkham's Blood Medicine and improved every day. I do all my own work now except the washing and ironing and I can accomplish as much in a day now as I would have taken me a week to do last winter and I try to get every one I know to take your medicine to build them up. You are welcome to use this letter as a testimonial if you like."—Mrs. CHAS. BAKER, 21 Spencer Ave., Hornell, N. Y.

In almost every neighborhood there are women who know of the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. They know because they have taken it and have been helped. Why don't you give it a trial?

Summer Pyjamas Of Pink Pongette

By Marie Belmont

Very convenient for summer wear are these pyjamas, developed in pink pongette bound in white batiste. The coat is slipped on over the head and tied below the waistline with the self material pink, finished in regular four-in-hand fashion.

The pyjamas are easily made and easily laundered, and can be made more practical still by developing them in some material which eliminates the necessity of laundering.

For those who prefer nightgowns, the same scallop treatment may be carried out at V-neck, sleeves and around the bottom.

Highway Fatalities
During the eighteen months that United States troops were engaged in the war overseas, 48,000 soldiers lost their lives on the battlefield. In exactly the same period, according to the New York Herald, 91,000 persons of whom 25,000 were children, were killed by automobiles on United States highways.

Asthma Victims. The man or woman subject to asthma is indeed a victim. What can be more terrifying than to suddenly be seized with paroxysms of choking which seem to fairly threaten the existence of life itself. From such a condition Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Asthma Remedy has brought many to completely restored health and happiness. It is known and prized in every section of this broad land.

Farmers to Gain $20,000,000

Advance in Price of Wheat Has Good Effect on Business

Western Canadian farmers, on the basis of recent advances in wheat prices, stand to realize about $20,000,000 more out of the 1921 crop than appeared possible at the time the slump in prices had reached the lowest level in December. Wheat prices now are approximately 35 cents a bushel higher than the low level figure of the closing month of 1921. There are about 70,000,000 bushels of wheat still in the hands of farmers to be sold, it is estimated. The advance in price, which is world-wide, will benefit farmers who have not disposed of their crops. The additional wealth available, if the price is maintained or if it advances still more, will have a splendid effect on conditions throughout Western Canada.
